Introduction

When was the last time you and your family sat down to a good dinner? Recently there has been a shift in society’s view of eating family meals together (Condrasky, 2006; Hamilton & Wilson, 2009). Families today have busy schedules. Kids are involved in extracurricular activities, and many mothers are more active in the workplace. Although most families would say that family meals are valuable, they often allow other things to become a priority, devaluing the act of eating family meals together. Making time for family meals is beneficial to the entire family.

One way to make sure your family sits down for family meals is to ask your children to help with dinner preparation and make it a fun experience. Some fun programs you can explore are Cooking Up Fun (http://www.cookingupfun.cornell.edu/), Cook It Up, and Cooking with Kids (http://cookingwithkids.net/). All of these can give you some good ideas about how to bond with your children as you prepare family meals. These programs highlight the importance of family meals and the benefits of creating the meal as a family (Thonney & Bisogni, 2006; Thomas & Irwin, 2011; Walters & Stacey, 2009; McIntosh et al., 2010).

Helpful Information

Why Are Family Meals Important?

Over the past 30 years obesity among children has increased. Many schools and community programs are encouraging healthy eating choices and habits among youth. One way to help youth make healthy food choices is by creating healthy eating choices and habits at home, starting with family meals. When parents value family dinners, children are likely to view family dinners as important. Family meals can provide important examples to show children what foods are good to eat and how much of the good foods they should eat (Lanigan & Power, 2008).

BENEFITS OF FAMILY MEALS FOR YOUTH

Eating family meals together benefits children in several ways.
Educational Benefits
- Increased focus on homework and reading for pleasure (Eisenberg, Olson, Neumark-Sztainer, Story, & Bearinger, 2004)
- Improved school performance (Hamilton & Wilson, 2009)
- Greater development of language skills (Snow & Beals, 2006)
- Increased and more sophisticated level of vocabulary (Snow & Beals, 2006)

Health Benefits
- Improved development of healthy eating patterns (Hamilton & Wilson, 2009)
- Higher intake of several essential nutrients (Croll, Hannan, Neumark-Sztainer, Perry, & Story, 2003)
- Decreased likelihood of having eating disorders (Ackard & Neumark-Sztainer, 2001)
- Decreased likelihood of being overweight (Fulkerson, Kubik, Story, Lylte, & Arcan, 2009)
- Less likely to develop depressive symptoms (Fulkerson et al., 2009)

Social and Behavioral Benefits
- Less likely to be involved with cigarette, alcohol, and marijuana use (Eisenberg et al., 2004)
- Increased sense of family connectedness, communication, and functioning (Hamilton & Wilson, 2009)
- Increased likelihood of resisting negative peer pressure (Fulkerson et al., 2006)
- More likely to experience positive identity assets (Fulkerson et al., 2006)
- Less likely to attempt suicide (Fulkerson et al., 2006)
- Less likely to engage in sexual intercourse (Fulkerson et al., 2006)

OVERALL BENEFITS FOR THE FAMILY
- Regular and consistent family time
- Reduction of anxiety and depression in children
- Increased feeling of togetherness, coherence, and solidarity
- Increased emotional and social bonding
- Shared nutrition
- Relaxing, talking, and laughing as a family unit

Things You Can Use
Each family can make meals a time of unique family bonding. A few common tips families can use to help each other enjoy family meals and create an atmosphere of warmth, unity, and respect are listed below.

1. Show interest in your family members by asking about their day.

   Here is an example of how the beginning of this conversation may look:

   Father: “Son, tell me something fun you did at school today.”

   Son: “Me and my friends built a castle at recess.”

   Mother: “That does sound like fun. Was it a big castle? Did you guys put guards and knights in front to protect the people who live in it?”

   These kinds of conversations validate a child and show that they are loved and cared for.

2. Compliment each other and provide positive feedback, encouragement, and support when necessary.

   This is important because everyone knows it feels good to have someone encourage us and notice our accomplishments. Whether congratulating a spouse on receiving a promotion, encouraging a daughter to apologize to her best friend because of an argument, or giving feedback to a son about his decision to play soccer, family meals provide a unique context in which all kinds of conversations can take place.

3. Turn off (or silence) television, cell phones, laptops, radios, music players, and other electronic devices.

   This is important because it helps get rid of any distractions and disruptions that can interfere with spending true quality (and quantity) time with family members (Hunt, Fazio, MacKenzie, & Moloney, 2011). As a result, everyone can focus on each other and strengthening family relationships.

4. Do not interrupt or talk over one another.
This is important because talking over someone else can be seen as rude and insensitive. Also, not interrupting or talking over someone shows respect to family members and lets them know that others are paying attention to what they are saying.

5. Plan and prepare meals together.
This is important because everyone can help decide what meal will be prepared. This process can build decision-making and negotiation skills among family members. The skills of providing clear feedback and expectations about what kinds of family meals everyone likes and dislikes can also be developed.

There are many barriers that may prevent families from having family meals. Creating meal plans and allowing everyone to play a role can minimize these barriers (Abbot & Byrd-Bredbenner, 2010). Table 1 provides a way to plan meals while Table 2 provides a schedule for meal preparation, including cooking, table setting, and cleanup. Table 3 provides a way to track current family meals and to schedule future family meals.

Conclusion
Eating family meals together typically results in positive benefits for family members. Benefits can include increases in educational, health, social, and behavioral skills. In addition, participating in family meals can increase positive family interactions and overall family well-being. Accessing programs designed to focus on mealtime and family and youth development can be critical to introducing families to the benefits of family meals.
